

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1835.

THIS DAY PUBLISHED, and for sale at the Counting Room of the MORNING POST, No. 19 Water street, the TRIAL of BEALS and GREENE for an alleged Libel upon ALFRED W. PIKE.

THE NEW COURT HOUSE.

The interior of this edifice is nearly completed, and two of the principal Court Rooms are ready for the reception of the Courts which they are designed to accommodate. During the past two years the architecture of this important public structure has been severely criticised in some of the papers, and it has been generally considered a fair object to level satirical squibs against. Its location has also been seriously called in question, but without much reason, we think, since it occupies a respectable site which has been devoted to the use of our Courts for nearly a century, and around which have long been concentrated the offices of the legal profession, and the officers of Justice from the highest to the lowest. Believing that a brief description of its internal accommodations and principal apartments will be of more use to our readers, as a guide, should any of them unfortunately have business therein,—which may Heaven avert—than a critical essay on its supposed deficiency in exterior elegance, or grandeur, we have minutely for their convenience the following memoranda:—

Basement story.—176 feet by 60: contains on the east side three large rooms, well fitted up, and lighted with gas, and occupied by the Centre watch—within these rooms are the entrances to three cells, for the confinement of prisoners brought in by the watch, whose cases are to be first inquired into by the officers of the watch. On the west side are ten cells, for the reception of prisoners for trial before any of the Courts above. Though stationary while there, they may be considered as prisoners in transitu—either to the State Prison, House of Correction, Common Jail, and sometimes liberty. As people will generally be shown the way to the above-mentioned apartments, when they may be supposed to have business there, a minute description of their locations is not necessary. On the west side are also two furnace rooms, for heating the upper portion of the building. A pump room, cellar, and a large apartment originally intended for the Grand Jury Room, we believe, constitutes the remainder of the conveniences in the basement story.

First floor.—North end: Police Court, 49 feet 10 inches by 26 feet, with an iron railing extending across, near the centre, to keep back the spectators, and prevent their crowding upon the sutors, witnesses and officers; Justices' Court, 31 ft. 10, by 20 ft. 3; office of Clerk of Police Court, and Judges' Room.—South end: office of Clerk of the Supreme Judicial Court, 40 ft. by 19 ft. 11, with an anti-room; and the office of the Clerk of Common Pleas, of the same size, but without an anti-room.

Second floor.—South end: Supreme Judicial Court, 49 ft. 10 by 40 feet, with a room for the Judges, communicating with the Law Library, on the East side, intervening between the United States Court Room, of the same dimensions as the Supreme Court, and having like that a gallery, on the side facing the Bench. There are also two safe-rooms, and another for the accommodation of witnesses and parties.

Third floor.—South end: the Court of Common Pleas, 49 ft. 10, by 40 ft. North End, Municipal Court, of the same dimensions, with gallery, and a mahogany "dock" for prisoners, so high that they cannot be seen from the rear, and surmounted by three inch nails driven upwards in imitation of spikes. The Grand Jury Room is on the west side, with rooms for witnesses, male and female, on the East side is the office of the Clerk of the Municipal Court, and the Judge's Room.

Between the first and the second floors, like a nest of boxes within a box, is the "Lobby," containing a sufficient number of rooms to accommodate all the panels of traverse juries that may have occasion to retire to deliberate on their verdicts, even should the four Jury Courts happen to be in session at the same time. The ascent to the "Lobby" is by the two inner flights of stairs. It can also be approached from the inner entrances of the large Court Rooms.

The furniture and fixtures of the various Court Rooms combine utility and elegance as well as may be. The carpets are of a firm fabric, and agreeable color. The lawyers' cloth-covered tables are quite classic, and the hair-bottom chairs truly comfortable.

The Probate Court and the Registry of Deeds are the only County Offices, which will not be contained in the New Court House. They are to be kept, we understand in two fire-proof buildings, to be constructed out of the stone of which the Old Court is built, and to be erected very near their present sites.

It is three weeks since the United States Circuit Court commenced its sittings in its new room, and yesterday morning, Judge THATCHER delivered the Charge to the Grand Jury, in the Municipal Court Room. His Honor embraced the opportunity, to introduce some historical notices of the building of the Old State House, and the two old Court Houses, the oldest of which has been demolished to make room for the present. His Honor also dwelt at some length upon the subject of insanity, as connected with the administration of Justice, having had his attention directed to the subject by the frequency with which the plea had been set up in defence of offences by criminals recently. His Honor expressed an opinion, that the lax mode of disciplining youth in modern times—particularly since the French Revolution—was not favorable to the growth of strong minds. He had also had occasion to observe, that many of the female sex manifested a disposition to abandon the gentle and soothing duties of domestic life, and engage in political discussions and transactions. We could not perceive the drift of His Honor's censure, unless he referred to female anti-slavery societies. He also adverted to the Temperance question, and remarked that it was, if properly conducted, in intimate connexion with a submission to the laws.—Innuendo, that the Rev. Mr. Cheever, while editor of the Landmark, broke the Law of Libel when he dreamt about Deacon Giles' Distillery. His Honor made some strong and well-timed remarks concerning mercantile frauds.

Upon our First Page will be found the interesting, able, and pertinent Address delivered by Mr. JOSSELYN, at the Dedication of the Hall erected by the Democratic Association of North End.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman dated

Moscow, 10th Sept. 1835.

My Dear Sir.—I believe my last was from the Baths of Carlsbad, which I left on the 9th August, and proceeding by way of Dresden, Leipzig, and Berlin, and remaining some time in each city, I embarked at Lubeck for St. Petersburg on the 1st of Sept. I am sure you never expected to have had a correspondent at Moscow, and I must admit I had no idea of coming here until I arrived at St. Petersburg. I there found I could see nothing of the manners and customs, and very little of the persons even of the Russians, unless I went into the interior; and thus determined to take this long journey of 728 versts; I found it less tiresome than I expected, and am gratified that I came. The country, through which I passed, is nearly a level all the way. There are only three towns, but many villages; all of which are composed of log-houses, many of which are anything but upright, having been stuck down in glorious confusion without any foundation; so that the houses conform to the natural unevenness of the ground. The people are, like the houses, rough and barbarous as possible, dressed principally in undressed skins with the hair inside. These garments they usually wear without any exchange; so that they have very thickly inhabited colonies of fleas and other vermin. At night they sleep in the dirt, often at the side of the road, on the ground; and this they do even now, when the nights are excessively cold, like ours in December. I have seen the frost glitter on their garments, as they lay extended in a profound sleep. I have noticed a great resemblance in the dress of the females to the Chinese, and much of the architecture here, is also of that character. This city is rising rapidly from the ruins, in which it lay after Napoleon left it in 1812, and is nearly entirely re-built already with many improvements. It is larger than I supposed, and in winter contains about 300,000 inhabitants. It abounds in Convents and in Churches, the domes of which are all very similar, and resemble in shape a large Swedish turnip more than anything else. The interior of these buildings is gaudy in the highest degree, having some decorations of gold and some of silver, but many more of a baser metal, and what would be called now very much in the Birmingham style; where almost gold and silver are so well imitated as to put the real article out of fashion. I have taken already a full survey of the city, and seen much more than I shall remember, or have time to commit to paper. The situation of the Kremlin on an eminence in the centre of the city is good; but I was disappointed with the architecture, and the general effect. The Hospitals here are however, really admirable institutions, and are cleaner, and larger, and better conducted than any I have seen.

Since I have seen the Prussians and the Russians, I estimate the difficulty, which Napoleon had to conquer them less than before. I see that mere numbers are nothing in a battle, and that education, discipline, and public or national sentiment are every thing. Witness the greatest battle of modern times that of Leipzig, where the French almost beat the united Austrians, Prussians, and Swedes, when the first numbered only 150,000 men, and the latter 275,000. Sixty thousand dead men were left on the field after a battle, which continued 100 hours. I apprehend less danger now from the power of Russia than I did once.

I have been amused, as I have passed through the various kingdoms of Europe the past year, to find how willing the present crowned heads are to permit the people to do homage to the memory of Napoleon. Indeed, they themselves are taking the lead, and beginning with Louis Philip, and ending with Nicholas the 1st, they are filling up every empty niche and space with his statue, or his bust, or a painting of him!!! It would seem as if they had waited until now, to be sure he would not come back again and overthrow their thrones once more, as he did from Elba. They appear now to think that he is really dead. Louis Philip is said to fear Charles the 10th more than any of the family of Napoleon; but if any one could only look for an hour at that poor old withered forlorn man, as I did recently at Prague, and entertain any feelings of fear, I think that such a man should never be a soldier. I could mention several old tea-drinking Ladies of whom I should entertain far more serious apprehensions. The day for such men has passed away.

Effects of high station.—An individual who is conscious of possessing universal esteem and who believes that he has received his just share of reputation, enjoys a tranquility of mind which is unfavorable to the intense exertion of the intellectual faculties. On the other hand, the consciousness of great deserts and of a small share of reputation rouses the mind to intense activity, and kindles it to a state of enthusiasm. Hence in the former case, an individual is seldom remarkable for originality in his opinions; but in the latter instance, one's opinions are apt to be not only original, but tinged likewise with a high degree of extravagance. This arises not from any affectation of originality for the sake of attracting notice, but from an intense action of the mind stimulated by ambition and a sense of injustice. Whenever passion and reason work together, the result is almost equal to inspiration; and they may be considered as the general cause of genius. For this reason we seldom find a writer of great original genius who fills any very high office. The dignity of the office is generally sufficient to satisfy his ambition. Originality of genius is usually found among that unfortunate class of men, whose circumstances prevented them from obtaining early in life, that distinction which they were conscious of deserving more than others upon whom it was bestowed.

In Maine the people are full of enterprise. A meeting of the citizens of Bangor, Bucksport and Orono, has been called for the purpose of adopting measures for the construction of a new steamboat to ply between Bangor and Boston. The Bangor Advertiser complains that the banking capital employed in that city for purposes of banking, is greatly inadequate to the wants of the business portion of the community.

"There are at this moment," (says the Advertiser,) in Bangor, six banks; yet, the sum total of their capitals amounts to no more than $600,000—scarcely a whit more than would enable a single concern that we could mention, to carry on successfully the extensive trade in which they are engaged." The inhabitants of East Machias will petition the legislature to be incorporated by the name of the East Machias Canal Company, for the purpose of making a canal uniting the tide waters of East Machias river with Hadley's Lake, so called, and many other lakes between said lake and the source of said river, and also Gardiner's lake and other lakes in the Gardiner stream. The greatly increased value of land in Maine, has made that State one of the richest in the Union.

Mrs Wool, we learn from the Transcript, is unable to perform in consequence of severe indisposition. As soon as we get the Amphitheatre completed people wont mind who is sick at the Tremont.

We shall visit the Menagerie in the course of a few days, and the performers there are rehearsing for an exhibition when we call. Prologue by Mr Hyena—Epilogue by Mr Tiger—Comic Song by Mr Monkey. Blitz is off soon—he is a clever fellow in his way, and should be treated well wherever he goes.

In the report of the late Trial at Salem, published yesterday, the length of Mr SALTONSTALL's argument is erroneously stated—it occupied more than three hours, instead of two.

Fashion and Table Talk.—The Liverpool correspondent of the New York Star, communicates the following important intelligence to the beau monde:—

"The changes in female dress have commenced.—Silken attire begins to supersede muslin. Shawls are getting worn. Those of French cashmere, with black grounds, and bouquets of bright flowers, embroidered, are most in vogue. Shawls, or square capes, made of black satin, with deep trimmings of fine black lace, are worn by the higher dames, and, over light dresses, have a rich and singularly elegant appearance.

Real and blonde lace (black) will be fashionable this winter, and dresses will be much trimmed with them.—Robes and pelisses of black satin, with black lace trimmings, will be fashionable.

Feathers, although a very graceful ornament, will not be worn in out-door bonnets or hats. Bonas are already in requisition. Indeed, furs, both for trimmings and tippets, will be in vogue. Sable has the preference.

The antique style of dress will be revived this winter. Some new silks are coming out. The fine rich flowered brocades will be revived.

The new fashionable colours will be maroon, violet, sea green, ponceau and black.

We shall not stop to split hairs with the Transcript about the manner in which it announced the Atlas's arrangement for an Express with the Message—the style of the paragraph indicated the spirit with which it was penned.

Shocking Occurrence.—We are informed that on Saturday last, Joseph Proctor, who was employed in Shephard's Paper Manufactory, Unionville, Framingham—while casting of the band from a horizontal rag machine, was caught by the leg and drawers, and drawn up, and over the main shaft, by which sad accident, one of his legs below the knee was torn off—and the remainder of the leg was fractured in several places—and a rupture of the abdomen took place.

His agonizing cries for assistance were heard in the adjoining rooms, and the machinery was instantly stopped. Surgical assistance was immediately procured, but he died last evening. Mr Proctor was only twenty-five years of age, was much esteemed as a citizen and a Christian—and was the only support of a widowed mother.—Mer. Jour.

Fire.—Yesterday morning about 10 o'clock, the extensive manufactory of Mr James Boyd, 27 Merchants Row, caught fire from some defect in the chimney of the building. Mr Boyd's stock of leather, &c., was much injured by the water thrown upon it. Loss, estimated at $2,500, insured at the Firemen's and Manufacturers' offices. The stock of goods in the adjoining stores of Messrs J. K. Wise, and Skinner & True, were also much injured by water. The Hancock Bank, and the office of the Navy Agent, experienced some inconvenience from the same cause. The building belongs to the heirs of David Rice, and is much damaged.—Transcript.

Law and Justice.—When a man is prosecuted for a libel or anything else, and is brought in not guilty, he has to pay all his own expenses. Now we only ask the question, isn't law in this case something different from justice? We don't wish to quarrel with established usages, nor with the decrees of far wiser heads than our own; but so it appears to us. Our friend Greene of the Post, in honest indignation, doing his duty as an independent editor, published a statement of pretty near facts. He was prosecuted—and the verdict shows that he had violated law and not justice—yet he has to pay his own costs, which must, from the length of the trial, be very heavy. Isn't this contrary to our honest sense of right? Galaxv.

"How do your potatoes turn out this year, friend Gubbins?"

"Why, rather slim, I guess."

"But I thought there were heavy crops this season."

"Well, generally, there are. But I was unlucky:—I bought some seed, which I planted in the Spring, and I find them to be like the Whig politicians—all tops, and no bottoms. They're pesky small potatoes, and but dreadful few of them in the hill.—Providence Herald.

Suicide.—Mr. George W. Browne of Church street, committed suicide yesterday forenoon, by cutting his throat with a razor. For some time previous he had been periodically affected with mental aberration, owing, it is believed, to pecuniary losses and reverse of fortune, and is supposed to have been in an unsound state of mind when he committed the act which deprived him of life. N. Y. Journ. Com.

We copy the following notice of the little periodical called the "Passion Flower," edited by Miss A. J. Reid of New York, from the Liverpool Journal:—

One of the "Yankee" novelties is a semi-monthly brochure, edited by Miss A. Reid, called "The Passion Flower." It contains engravings of flowers, and a good share of lively, clever, original writing, by the fair lady-editor.

A Mathematical Toast.—The following toast is said to have been drunk at an association of School Masters:—

"The fair daughters of Columbia:—May they add virtue to beauty, substract envy from friendship, multiply amiable accomplishments by sweetness of temper, divide time by sociability and economy, and reduce scandal to its lowest denomination."

Imports.—We are told that the imports at the port of New York, for the last quarter, amounted to the immense sum of $35,000,000.—N. Y. Eve. Post.

"Our canals a solitude—our lakes a barren waste of water—our ships rotting at the wharves, and farmers' produce perishing on their hands."—Vide Solitude EWING.

The Marlboro' Hotel is now under lease to Mr Barker, by whom it will be conducted as heretofore.

Mr Barker had a lease of it from the late owner, which does not expire until next December.—Daily Advocate.

A Butler well provided for.—The Earl of Devon left his personal property in Paris to his butler, together with other property, which, altogether, brought under the hammer, a sum equal to more than half a million of dollars!

Public Lands.—The government receipts for the sale of public lands are said to have amounted during the past year to eleven millions of dollars. There must be a prodigious emigration to the west.

The boxes of Caldwell's new theatre, at New Orleans, are rented at $1000 each during the season.—Single seats in the front rows are one dollar and a half; other seats one dollar.

The British Revenue ending Oct. 15, was £41,801,367, which is a deficit of £1,804,600 from last year to the same period. Chiefly owing to the falling off of the assessed taxes.

Beat this, who can?—A single tree, in the orchard of Mr Isaac Eastman, of Epsom, in this county, produced the present year seventy-two bushels of apples.—N. H. Pat.

The English money market is easier, in consequence of the Bank of England having rescinded their resolution not to discount the issues of joint stock companies.

We regret to learn that the Woods are "artificial" not to give any Concerts during their engagement.—Advocate.

Lotteries throughout France will entirely cease at the end of this year.

The fire-offices in London calculate upon an alarm every day, and thirty-two serious fires every year.

For the Boston Morning Post.

Mr. Editor.—The following Communication, which was sent to the Daily Advocate on the 26th ult., having failed to make its appearance in that paper, I request of you the favor to give it an insertion in the Post. It will be perceived that the article itself sufficiently explains the subject to make it intelligible to your readers:—

To the Editor of the Daily Advocate:—

Sir,—I perceive by your paper of Tuesday, 24th ult. that you have had the fairness and independence to publish the Communication which I addressed to you; and while I thank you for it, I beg to be permitted to make a few remarks on the commentary with which you accompanied it. You say—"We perceive that a Jackson Mason in Salem," has been touched by the demonstration that "the Democracy have lost the Senate solely by the obstinacy of Jackson Masons."—I would beg, Sir, to say in reply, assertion is not demonstration. How are the facts? You state that "Mr. Farnsworth, who had been a Mason, wrote a sensible letter to the Antimasons, which satisfied them that he had no attachment to Masonry, and they gave him their votes. Mr. Savary stuck to his Masonry, and of course Antimasons did not vote for him." Well, Sir, what was the result? Did Mr. Farnsworth fare better than Mr. Savary, his apparently less fortunate associate? Was he elected? Oh no, but he got a few more votes. Well, Sir, how was it with the other four candidates on the Democratic Ticket, who were adopted without scruple by the Antimasons? Were they elected? No, they failed of an election for the same reason Mr. Farnsworth did, the want of votes. The fact is, the combined strength of the Democratic Party and the Antimasons, was insufficient to carry either of the five candidates who had received the nomination of both parties.

How then stands the "demonstration?" If the five candidates who received the vote of both parties, had been elected, and Mr. Savary, who "stuck to his Masonry," and consequently did not receive the votes of Antimasons," had alone failed of an election, while his opponent on the Whig Ticket succeeded, and the consequence of this had been to give the whigs the preponderance in the Senate—if, I say, all this had resulted from the circumstances of the late contest, why then there would have been the facts out of which to make the show of a demonstration. But as the facts in the case are, I trust I have made a demonstration, which show most clearly to every candid mind, that you have arrived at "a most lame and impotent conclusion."

In closing, permit me to remark, that as it respects the declaration that "Jackson Masons must give up their Masonry or give up their Democracy," I shall be slow to believe, from my knowledge of both, that the great body of the Democratic Party can be brought to act on the principle that the one is incompatible with the other.

A JACKSON MASON.

Salem, Dec. 5.

For the Boston Morning Post.

Mr. Editor—I have seen in the Evening Gazette an account of my meeting with John Lowell which says I inflicted upon the back of his head, with my hand, a stunning blow.—The facts in the case are as follows:—Mr. Lowell, brother to John Codman, deceased, by marriage, has used exertions to injure my character, and prevent the Codman family from paying my demand. Knowing this to be true, I felt much irritated, and meeting him opposite Mr. Mott's meeting house, I looked at him with marked contempt, when Lowell, lifting his cane, demanded how I dared to look at him, and said he would knock me down.—I replied, if he dared to touch me, I would tare him to pieces. He made some reply and moved on. I followed and made a remark that hurt his pride, when he turned and struck me with his cane—I presume it had a sword in it. On receiving this blow, I took him by the collar, pushed his head through the window of Mr. Severns, when Nelson French and others came out of the shop and took me off, saying "are you going to kill the man?" This is a true statement and will be confirmed by many who saw it. WILLIAM VANS.

Boston, Dec. 7th. 1835.

We regret to learn by letters from Fort Towson, that Lieut. James H. Taylor, of the Third Infantry, U. S. Army, was unfortunately drowned on the 17th October, while attempting to cross the Cossatot river, about 70 miles from Fort Towson.

BOSTON ACADEMY OF PENMANSHIP AND BOOK-KEEPING.
No. 2 Amory Hall.
(Corner of Washington and West streets.)
MESSRS. RICHARDSON & STRATTON, having associated themselves in business, for the purpose of instruction in Penmanship, Book Keeping and Arithmetic, beg leave to offer the citizens of Boston and the public generally a prospectus of the course pursued by them.
Messrs Richardson & Stratton, are both so well known to the Boston public, as teachers of Penmanship, and have taught that art with so much success in this city, that it will perhaps be unnecessary to say any thing further of their system of instruction, the merits of which are so universally acknowledged. For the information, however, of persons who reside at a distance, and may be desirous of being taught the above branches, they beg leave to add, that the system is simple and natural, and will readily remove that stiffness of the arm and fingers which is so embarrassing, and which other professors have heretofore almost entirely failed to accomplish.
BOOK-KEEPING.
In the department of Book-keeping, Messrs. R. & S. have had much personal experience, and have also derived valuable information from several eminent authorities of this city, which enables them to combine the elementary instructions of the master, with the practical improvements of the merchant. They propose to initiate young gentlemen, who are about entering upon Commercial Business, not to teach mere mechanics, but to impart to them a knowledge of the most approved principles of mercantile experience, and give their pupils practical practice, as well enable them, when they arrive at the counting house, to transact business with precision and despatch.
Terms in the above branches may be known by application at their room.
Classes in session morning, afternoon and evening.
